Writing Prompts

April is not only National Library Week, but it’s also National Poetry Month. It’s a great time to tap into your creativity with writing and reflection. Share your composition with us on Facebook (@punxsutawneylibrary), Instagram (@punxsylibrary), or Twitter (@punxsylibrary) with the hashtag #NationalLibraryWeek. If you share a poem, add #NationalPoetryMonth. You can also e-mail your writings to info@punxsutawneylibrary.org just to share with us.

1. Identify a book or movie character to whom you feel you can relate. What makes you feel connected to this character?

2. Rewrite the ending of the last book you read

3. Write a haiku (1st line: 5 syllables, 2nd line: 7 syllables, 3rd line: 5 syllables)
   Libraries are more
   Community, tech, people
   Books, though, always cool

4. Write a poem and submit it to Rebecca M. Arthurs Memorial Library’s (member library in Jefferson County Library System) annual poetry contest. Details available on their website at https://www.rmalib.org/.

5. Write a short story in 280 characters or less

6. Where do you think technology will be in 10 years and why? What do you think people will be able to do or access?

7. What would you like to see available at your library and why?

8. What do you love about your library?
